THE SILVER HERITAGE

“Leishan is a county of Guizhou Province - home to the majority of the Miao population in China. Being the largest Miao community in the nation, the province attracts numerous travelers each year by its splendid culture, embodied in the costumes, stilt houses, etiquette, and festivals.

Besides producing some of the most beautiful embroidery in the world, which is on China's intangible cultural heritage list, the Miao is also known for its exquisite silver accessories.

For more than 400 years, it's been custom to decorate oneself head to toe with silver hats, horns, comb, earrings, neckband, necklace, bracelet, etc.. The purpose is primarily aesthetic, but they are also worn as amulets to ward off evil, and as symbols of wealth. Miao's clothes bear strong cultural messages, embodying ancient totems and historic legends in the patterns and favoring bold basic colors - red and green, yellow, orange, bright blue and white on a blue background.

For these reasons, historians view Miao's handiwork as the “Wearable History Book.”
